ANTHONY AND CLEOPATRA.

The Richmond Enquirer, in referring to a letter from its Louisville correspondent, written on board the steamer "General Lytle," says:

The name of this stranger recalls one of the most chivalric and pleasing incidents of the late war. It was in one of the battles of the West—which of them our memory does not supply—that General Robert H. Lytle, a member of the Cincinnati press, who had risen not only from printer to editor, but from private to general, was killed far in advance of his command while gallantly leading an assault upon our lines. His horse bore his corpse into our lines, and the steed and his dead rider were both captured. So soon as it was known that the author of that rare poem, as familiar and as greatly admired South as North, "I am Dying, Egypt, Dying," lay dead in the camp, officers and men crowded around to take a last look at the face of the poet-soldier who had achieved so great a literary triumph. There was no rejoicing over the death of this fallen enemy; but there was in truth something on each soldier's cheek that for the moment washed away the stains of powder. Tenderly they took him up, and when the battle was over an escort of honor, appointed from among the leading Confederate officers, bore him back to his own camp, under a flag of truce, on a rudely constructed funeral bier, with his martial cloak around him. In life he had touched that chord of human sympathy which makes all the world akin—and in death its harmonious vibrations silenced all resentment and thrilled the hearts alike of friends and foes with a nobler passion than hatred or revenge.

The following is the poem referred to:
"I am dying, Egypt, dying"—SHAKESPEARE.

I am dying, Egypt, dying—
Ebb the crimson life-tide fast
And the dark Plutonian shadows
Gather on the evening blast.
Let them arm, oh! Queen support me,
Hush thy sobs and bow thine ear;
Listen to the great heart secrets
Thou, and thou alone must hear.
Though my scarred and veteran legions
Bear their eagles high no more,
And my wrecked and shattered galleys
Strew dark Aetium's fatal shore,
Though no glittering galleys surround me,
Prompt to do their master's will,
I must perish like a Roman—
Die the great Triumvir still.
Let not Caesar's servile minions
Mock the lion thus laid low;
'Twas no foeman's hand that slew him,
'Twas his own that struck the blow.
Hear, then, pillow'd on thy bosom
Ere his star fades quite away,
Him, who drunk with thy carresses,
Madly flung a world away!
Should the base plebeian rabble
Dare assail my fame at Rome,
Where the noble spouse, Octavia,
Weeps within her widowed home,
Seek her—say the gods have told me,
Altars, augurs, circling wings,
That her blood, with mine commingled,
Yet shall mount the throne of kings.
And for thee, star-eyed Egyptian,
Glorious sorceress of the Nile,
Light the path to Stygian horrors
With the splendor of thy smile;
Give to Caesar crowns and arches,
Let his brow the laurel twice;
I could scorn the Sonate's triumph,
Triumphing to love like thine!
I am dying, Egypt, dying!
Hark! the insulating foeman's cry,
They are coming—quick! my falchion!
Let me front them ere I die—
Ah! no more amid the battle
Shall my hand exulting swell,
Isis and Osiris guard thee—
Cleopatra! Rome! farewell!
The following additional stanzas have been added anonymously:
"Like a love-besotted Roman
Did he try the Stygian waters,
Nor could Egypt's God, Osiris,
Nor her Queen, his mistress, save.
Where is now the fair enchantress—
Where her drunken Roman slave?
Their mad souls, so mad with passion
Find no rest in earthly grave!
In the deep Tartarean Hades
Wandering still those lovers live
Seeking Lethe's quiet waters,
Or some guide, some hope to give.
Behold the sunlit fields, Elysian,
Never open to their sight;
All around them Stygian darkness
And the black Plutonian night."

Both EYES TAKEN OUT.—Dr. Joseph A. White, of the Washington University, yesterday performed an operation on Frank Beatty, who has been in the Maryland penitentiary nearly two years, sentenced for attempting to kill Fanny Cole, in the celebrated hatchet case. Dr. White was assisted by Drs. Reynolds and Boyle, and the operation consisted of enucleating both eyes. The patient was placed on a table in the prison hospital, and after being put under the influence of chloroform, Dr. White proceeded to enucleate his left eye. Distending from the lid with the eye speculum he proceeded to dissect away the "sclerotic covering" of the eye ball, then dissecting the recti and oblique muscles by means of hooks, forceps and scissors, divided the optic nerve and lifted the eye from its socket, the operation being performed in twenty minutes. Beatty is a very robust, strong man, about 27 years of age, and has been blind ten years, erysipelas being the supposed cause. The optic nerve was becoming diseased, therefore the enucleating process became necessary. The doctor immediately performed the same operation on the right eye, which he did in ten minutes. Subsequently Dr. White performed the same operation on a woman in the prison, occupying only ten minutes.—Balt Sun.
